FLEXIBLE WORK ARRANGEMENTS POLICY

1.0 Purpose

The Flexible Work Arrangement Policy provides a framework and clear guidelines within which the Bank can effectively implement a suite of work arrangements which will allow members of staff a greater degree of flexibility in certain circumstances. This policy governs the different modalities, locations of work and general requirements for consideration and approval of each work arrangement. Members of staff have the flexibility to work from home or an approved remote location in some instances, or have modifications to official start and end times in others. The goal of the flexible arrangements is primarily to attract and retain talent, as well as enhance our employee experience via increased flexibility and work-life balance. It will guide the employer/employee relationship in the execution of each flexible work arrangement. The policy also outlines measures to ensure the maintenance of employee engagement and productivity.

2.0 Scope

This policy applies to all members of staff whose duties and responsibilities can be effectively performed remotely or through modifications to work times and days.

3.0 Policy Objectives

The objectives of the Flexible Work Arrangements are to:

1. Provide the organization and employees with flexibility in working arrangements.
2. Allow for an improved experience and work-life balance for employees;
3. Provide the organization with a wider talent pool;
4. Aid in the management of onsite facilities to include, inter alia, office space and furniture.
5. Reduce commuting time and costs;
6. Reduce overhead costs in the long run.

4.0 Policy Statement

The Bank will consider and approve requests/applications from staff for the flexible work arrangements for pre-determined and agreed periods. The approval for staff to perform specific work obligations during agreed work hours/days is entirely at the discretion of the Bank.

5.0 Eligibility Requirements

Members of staff must meet the following pre-eligibility requirements to be considered for Flexible Work Arrangements:

- a) Job functions or projects can efficiently and effectively be carried out off site (See Appendix 2);
- b) Satisfactory Employee Readiness Assessment (See Appendix 3)

Requirements (b) may be temporarily waived in the event of illness, Act of God or a public health emergency. Flexible Work Arrangements will not be approved for the following staff:

- (a) Those employees working under a Performance Improvement Plan; or
- (b) Employees who were subject to disciplinary action in the last two (2) years.

6.0 Job Suitability

Some jobs may be not suited for remote working, because they require an in-person presence at the office. These include positions requiring:

- (a) Face-to-face personal contact.
- (b) Hands on operation of equipment, vehicles or other onsite assets.

General Conditions for Flexi-Hours:

- (c) Job can be performed within a flexible timeline.

8.0 Considerations for Approval of Flexible Work Arrangement

The Bank is responsible for determining whether an employee can participate in the flexible work arrangement and whether the nature of the function performed by the employee allows access to work arrangements outside of the traditional on-site work model. The following are key areas of consideration by the Bank:

a) Employee Requirements - The Employee should:

- (a) Possess the competence and ability to perform assigned duties without close supervision, in the judgement of the Head of Department/Division Chief.
- (b) Be able to effectively deliver outputs consistent with work requirements without distractions.
- (c) Ensure that the nature of the work can be accomplished through technology and that he/she has the requisite IT equipment to perform his/her duties.
- (d) Have higher than average self-discipline and self-management skills, particularly time management as assessed by HOD/Division Chief.
- (e) Be able to protect sensitive information in a remote environment.

b) Employee Engagement

Critical to the success of the flexible working arrangements is how employees are engaged, employees need to feel engaged and connected to their leaders, colleagues and to the Bank (mission, values and culture). Key to successful engagements are:

- Communication

Communication is the first and most important step in assuring an engaged workforce, and it is of vital importance when some of your employees have alternate schedules or operate from distant locations. Managers will need to employ an intentional approach to connecting with their employees, through frequent communication.

- Creation and maintenance of routines

Employees can benefit from routines even when they are not in the same space (onsite vs. remote) routines and touchpoints can bring team members together. Camaraderie is vital to engagement and employees are generally happier and more productive when they have a feeling of working with others toward a common goal. Create frequent check-ins with your employees. A scheduled weekly check-in is still important to keep the communication open, get a status update on progress, and keep work from getting passed over. Be intentional about checking in especially with your new employees.

- Recognise & Reward Achievements

Managers should ensure specific ways of tracking as well as rewarding and recognising employees who attain/achieve their milestones. Reward and recognition are important motivators for employees, this expectation can be further amplified in the flexible work arrangement as employees strive to stay connected with the Bank.

- Create career growth and development to also consider flexible employees.

Managers are required to foster inclusion by creating development plans with flexible employees in mind. Practice recording of development activities where employees can access the information post the event, whether it be training or just regular employee power ups, save these so flexible employees can benefit.

- Build trust with employees by empowering them

Managers should engage employees in taking ownership of their work, this helps to build trust. Set goals for your employees and allow them to deliver on outcomes, dependent on the task allow freedom for decision making. Each employee will work on their own schedule, however, if their hearts and minds are focused on the overall goal then the probability of success is greater.

9.0 Performance Management

To ensure the effectiveness of the flexible working arrangements, performance management and employee engagement is critical. Performance standards for employees assigned to the hybrid is the same as those for full-time on-site employees. Whilst the performance expectations remain in effect, a more intentional and targeted approach to measuring and monitoring is key for success.

Supervisors and supervisees must ensure the following:

- (a) SMART Objectives are established and agreed by both parties prior to commencing the WFH arrangement;
- (b) Agreed arrangements for the immediate Line Manager/Supervisor and the team member to review progress jointly at appropriate intervals;
- (c) A clear understanding of how any development/training needs will be met in cases where hybrid work is likely to occur over an extended period;
- (d) The staff member is provided with the requisite support to reasonably meet the required performance standards.
- (e) Where an employee is on a hybrid model of work for a significant portion of their time, the Managers/Supervisors must ensure that he/she keeps frequent contact with the employee. Importantly also, Managers/Supervisors must ensure that all the requirements of the Performance Management System are met. The term frequent contact must be within the normal requirements for the performance of the duties carried out by the team member who is being assigned to work from home.

9.1 Measuring Productivity in Flexible Work Arrangements

Measuring productivity tracking output, employee engagement, motivation, and well-being. It is important to be aware of the limitations of the data and metrics that are being collected, and to consider multiple measures and perspectives to get a full picture of employee productivity.

a) Outcome-based metrics

These metrics shift the focus from hours worked to outputs. Outcome based metrics may be used to assist the Bank in achieving measurable outcomes. Some possible metrics are projects completed, reports submitted, and customer complaints resolved.

b) Productivity tracking tools

The HCM will allow the Bank to use technology to track employee productivity. An approved project management software may be leveraged to track projects. This will help the Bank to monitor the time employees spend on different tasks and projects and assess their performance accordingly.

Disclaimer: An objective consideration of Flexible Work Arrangement Policy is intended to ensure an equitable process, but does not guarantee similar outcomes among employees due to differences in job roles, job performance and departmental operations. Therefore, some employees will not be able to take advantage of every provision allowed by this policy.
